Scanaba Daily Press

A School

Mirrott a teacher at Bark River-Marrie High School, sipped a Coke et an Escawho restaurant with Supt. of Schools William Pearson, who stirred black coffee, and talked about the present Bark River-Hairis High

"I was in school one day when I saw what looked like a snake curling around a pipe," Blowett said. "I thought one of the kids was playing a joke with one of those rubber snakes so I went over to get it. I knew it wasn't a joke when it hissed at me."

The two educators smiled. It almost seemed

They told about the pails and wastebaskets snotted around classrooms to catch the water when it rains. They told about the screenless windows which leave students two alternatives in the warm spring and fall afternoons - study in stifling heat or study with the flies. They told about the mice and rate that reside in the building, about the laboratory pipes that have died of old age, the doors that aren't square and don't stal very well. They told about the lack of accreditation of the high school program because of the lack of an acceptable building.

Voters of the district will have an opportunity to remedy these conditions Monday in an ction on a $565,000 bond issue to build a new high school to adjoin the Bark River-Harris elementary school.

Passing the proposal will require some sacrifice on the part of taxpayers of the district. Nobody is hiding the fact that more debt retirement millage will be required. But the finanting program developed by the Board of Education and given approval by the state apparently is sound. And the students have made sufficient sacrifice.

If there is any argument against Bark River-Harris building a new high school at this time it has to lie in the future of the district and the convessed state interest in eliminating the smaller school systems through consolidation or annexation. The immediate prospect of Bark River-Harris uniting with Escapeba Area on the east or the North Central Area Schools on the west suggestions, the North Central proposal most appears slim, however.

Voters of the district have rejected both recently. And exploratory overtures to the Escameba Area Board of Education in recent years have been quietly turned down because the Escaneba Area High School already is filled over capacity. Addition of students from Bark River-Harris to the Stillding would tax it even more severely or force an addition.

Even if at some time in the future the peoble of Bark River-Harris decided to join with another school district, or if consolidation was forced by the State of Michigan, the proposed new high school facility would not be wasted. With a new school, the growth potential of the area is improved.

And if consolidation does lie ahead — an educational direction that some educators are beginning to question for small high school districts — the new building obviously would be needed for junior high and elementary instruction, say Bark River officials.

The critical consideration, however, is still the condition of the present, 80-year-old school building. It just can't do the job. A "Yes" vote

Peninsula Poteourri

There are still 11 "iron men" around to play high school football. Little Brinnley in the eastern end of the Upper Peninsula proved that last weekend when the Bays upset favored Pickfeed. 32,23. Brimley played the game with 11 gridders. "I've got nothing but respect for those It Brimley kids that played the entire game." commented losing coach Lynn Hopkins of Pickford following the defeat.

Menominee police are conducting their investigation into the slaying of a deer in Henes Park. According to police, a witness reported seeing three persons near the fence and apparently damaging it. Police checked the area, but could find no damage. Later Harvey Inman. caretacker, discovered the gutted careass and remorted it to police. Inman said the deer, known as Bobby — the second largest buck in the deeryard — was slain with an arrow.

Housekeeping headaches by the hundreds are haunting Supt. Bill Poppink as he juggles students, books, furniture, equipment and budget trying to make a happy home for Sault Area High School students in a new building where much of the needed equipment is weeks late in delivery or still en route because of the late summer trucking strike. Poppink even has that horrible deadline hanging over his shoulders --the first party when all the "in-laws" are coming to call Oct. 18 the taxpaying public of Sault Ste. Marie and assorted bigwigs will be on hand for the formal dedication and first open house.

A former Iron Mountain area youth, Robert J. Varley. 19. has been bound over to the November term of Dickinson County circuit court on two counts of arson at an occupied dwelling. Now of Chicago, Verley is charged in a fire at the Bernard Hover home in Iron Mountain and a fire at the Raymond Childs residence in Kingsford. On a humber yard fire personal property count he will appear at a later date in district court.

Den Nardi of Ishperning rolled a 787 series at the Miracle Bowl and Lounge in the Ishperning Change Ledgue recently. This was second best total at the Miracle since the lanes were opened. It is the Miracle since the lanes were opened. It is a series with a 214, followed the series with a 277. He have the strikes in a row in the third game there is a series on his first ball in the frame. Mardi picked up the spare and followed with an eight exact.

Does President Need Student News Office?

Do we need a multiplication of jobs in the White House devoted to getting news of the Administration out to the public? Herbert Klein, Nixon's Director of Communications, isspeed to clear the channel and he has always been cooperative with the press. However, a young graduate student of the University of Southern Californie, Lowell Ponte, thinks Klein is too busy dealing with the "large establishment media" to take care! of the "small press," perticupress represented by college

As a "summer interne" in Washington, Ponte has been pressing a demand for a White House news Ombudemen or Ombudsmen, an "office of access" that would take all sorts of questions from interested parties and ineist that the White House staff yield honest answers.

The risk is this sort of proposal is that an Ombudsman would lack the muscle to get at information that might prove demaging to the Republican Administration. And any Ombudemen would have to be something of a genius to keep clear of the crossfire that would predictably result if the 'lefts" and the "rights" on the White House staff began to compete for his ear.

Even so, there is a germ of common sense in Ponte's pro-

The "big press" doesn't need an "office of access" to obtain White House news; it has experienced reporters and columnists who know how to cultivate sources without hurting informants by disclosing identity. However, Ponte is thinking in terms of his own collegiate background. What he really wants is someone in the White House who would be campus news editors, or to re-ate or "small press" reporter to the party in possession of the required information.

Ponte's idea tales cogency from his own critique of college journalism.

The campus journalist, he says, begins by assuming that government is "inaccessible." It is the "Establishment," and as such is not going to tell anything that might reflect on Ms own capacity to govern.

Defeated at the start by his essumptions, the college journalist does not attempt any fresh reporting of distant matters. He takes his "news" from the "big media" (the journals, the magazines and the TV-Radio networks that are always gatting it in the nack from Vice President Agnew), and proceeds to "analyze" the reporting done by others.

Analysis is, of course, an important function of the press. Every columnist knows, however, that if he fails to make the indicated telephone call he may miss something that puts a different light on even the most accurate spot news. The "interpreter" who is only an analyst, not a reporter, is not likely to come up with anything that the skilled newspaper reader or TVwatcher cannot figure out for

Says Pente of the average college journalist, "Being an interpreter rather than a reporter—the result of being too distant from the news itselfmakes it easy to think in easy stereotypes. If the government wants to change this situation, it must try talking directly with-not at-the small press representing the American taxpayer and the campus press representing millions of students, at majority of whom feel available to dig things out for in doubt about American values, goals, and society in gen-

Thinking back to last spring, it is obvious that Ponte has a point. /

How many college editors tried to discover the reasons for the Cambodian operation? There was much in the college press about campus "activism" in opposing what was glibly called an "extension" of the Vietnamese War.

A White House "office of access" might have referred an inquiring undergraduate editor to someone who could have told about the internal Admin-Cambedian decision, which was undertaken not with a view to "extending" the war but to narrowing it by the destruction of enemy material that could have kept the conflict going on and on in time.

Irish Clean Up Cemetery Where Nixon Kin Buried

TIMAHOE, Ireland (AP) -Workers today began clearing a weed-choked Quaker cometery in Timehoe, 40 miles southwest of Dublin, where local residents say President Nixon's greatgreat-grandfather, Thomas Milhouse, is buried. The President and his wife

Pat, whose maiden name was Ryan and whose relatives are believed to live in County Tipperary, arrive in Ireland Oct. 3 for a three-day visit. Timehoe is on the itinerary.

Recently, Irish newspaper reporters were unable to find anybody in the two areas connected with either the President's family or his wife's. Nonetheless, at the request of America's ambassedor to Iroland, John Moore, surveyors and landscape gardeners moved into the Timahoe comtery to restore broken walls and tombstones and pull weeds.

Build A School

Paul Blewett, a teacher at Bark River-Harris High School, sipped a Coke at an Escanaba restaurant with Supt. of Schools William Pearson, who stirred black coffee, and talked about the present Bark River-Harris High School.

"I was in school one day when I saw what looked like a snake curling around a pipe," Blewett said. "I thought one of the kids was playing a joke with one of those rubber snakes so I went over to get it. I knew it wasn't a joke when it hissed at me."

The two educators smiled. It almost seemed funny.

They told about the pails and wastebaskets spotted around classrooms to catch the water when it rains. They told about the screenless windows which leave students two alternatives in the warm spring and fall afternoons - study in stifling heat or study with the flies. They told about the mice and rats that reside in the building, about the laboratory pipes that have died of old age, the doors that aren't square and don't seal very well. They told about the lack of accreditation of the high school program because of the lack of an acceptable building.

Voters of the district will have an opportunity to remedy these conditions Monday in an election on a $565,000 bond issue to build a new high school to adjoin the Bark River-Harris elementary school.

Passing the proposal will require some sacrifice on the part of taxpayers of the district. Nobody is hiding the fact that more debt retirement millage will be required. But the financing program developed by the Board of Education and given approval by the state apparently is sound. And the students have made sufficient sacrifice.

If there is any argument against Bark River-Harris building a new high school at this time it has to lie in the future of the district and the expressed state interest in eliminating the smaller school systems through consolidation or annexation. The immediate prospect of Bark River-Harris uniting with Escanaba Area on the east or the North Central Area Schools on the west suggestions, the North Central proposal most appears slim, however.

Voters of the district have rejected both recently. And exploratory overtures to the Escanaba Area Board of Education in recent years have been quietly turned down because the Escanaba Area High School already is filled over capacity. Addition of students from Bark River-Harris to the building would tax it even more severely or force an addition.

Even if at some time in the future the people of Bark River-Harris decided to join with another school district, or if consolidation was forced by the State of Michigan, the proposed new high school facility would not be wasted. With a new school, the growth potential of the area is improved.

And if consolidation does lie ahead - an educational direction that some educators are beginning to question for small high school districts - the new building obviously would be needed for junior high and elementary instruction, say Bark River officials.

The critical consideration, however, is still the condition of the present, 80-year-old school building. It just can't do the job. A "Yes" vote is necessary.

There are still 11 "iron men" around to play high school football. Little Brimley in the eastern end of the Upper Peninsula proved that last weekend when the Bays upset favored Pickford, 32-23. of jobs in the White House devoted to getting news of the Administration out to the public? Herbert Klein, Nixon's Director of Communications, is supposed to clear the channels, and he has always been cooperative with the press.

However, a young graduate student at the University of Southern California, Lowell Ponte, thinks Klein is too busy dealing with the "large establishment media" to take care of the "small press," particularly that part of the small press represented by college newspapers.

As a "summer interne" in Washington, Ponte has been pressing a demand for a White House news Ombudsman or Ombudsmen, an "office of access" that would take all sorts of questions from interested parties and insist that the White House staff yield honest answers.

The risk is this sort of proposal is that an Ombudsman would lack the muscle to get at information that might prove damaging to the Republican Administration. And any Ombudsman would have to be something of a genius to keep clear of the crossfire that would predictably result if the "lefts" and the "rights" on the White House staff began to compete for his ear.

Even so, there is a germ of common sense in Ponte's pro-

How many college editors tried to discover the reasons for the Cambodian operation? There was much in the college press about campus "activism" in opposing what was glibly called an "extension" of the Vietnamese War.

A White House "office of access" might have referred an inquiring undergraduate editor to someone who could have told about the internal Administration debates leading to the Cambodian decision, which was undertaken not with a view to "extending" the war but to narrowing it by the destruction of enemy material that could have kept the conflict going on and on in time.

Teaching Children... ...Together

By DR. JAMES R. RYAN

Superintendent Escanaba Area Public Schools

This article about the Escanaba Area School District is one of a series planned weekly. The Board of Education and I have two objectives to accomplish with these articles: 1, to provide another opportunity for you to make your concerns and wishes about education known to those of us who are responsible for running your schools; and 2, to provide you with information about your schools which you may find helpful, Education is a business, and an expensive one at that! But dollars-and-cents and buildings are not, in my opinion, the most important part of the whole process. Of vital importance are the people in the schools: the children, the teachers, the administrators, the parents and all the taxpayers of the district.

Because we all want the best school program possible with the wisest use of school taxes that we can manage, open lines of communication between all the people in the schools are as-

The schools need you. This is a point which can't be stressed strongly enough. Some of you will be called upon to serve in advisory capacities and in other ways. Hopefully, you will make your special services and talents available.

Since my arrival in Escanaba. I have had the pleasure of meeting many of you. Whenever conversation would center on Escanaba Area schools and our total educational program, at no time did anyone mention, or even suggest, that they would be satisfied with a second-rate school system. Our people seem to want a good school program. I see the opportunity ahead for us to continue making progress on the projects that are sound programs, and also to expand our efforts for good schools into other areas wherever necessary.

Briefly, these are my goals: to hear all our kids say, "I like school;" to hear parents say, "We don't want our youngsters to attend any other schools but those in this district;" to hear other teachers say of our teachers, "Let's listen to what he has to say. He's from the Escanaba Area Public School System."

You are requested to send questions you might have at any time to my office. We will answer as many questions as possible in this column. Names of questioners will not be published but, because there may be more questions than this weekly article can handle, please include name and address when you write so we may send a personal reply to your question. Write to: Dr. James R. Ryan, Superintendent of Schools, 1219 N. 19th St., Escanaba 49829.

A .-- it is true to a degree When you purchase the wellpaper, ask the dealer to sell you the special paste designed for use with vinyl. In applying it, spread it on uniformly with a brush or roller, being sure not to skip any spots, especially around the edges. When you hang one piece of wallcovering, smooth it out with a wide putty knife, working from the center toward the edges. Then smooth the edges with a seer roller. Go on to the next strip of wallcovering, but take a look every once in a while to see whether the edges of the first strip are securely ettached. If not, go over them again with the seem roller. Nine times out of 10, this will be sufficient. But if you finish the job and find some of the edges aren't flat, buy a small quantity of adhesive made for stubborn vinyl edges and apply it under the seams.

A .-- You'd have to bleach the wood if you were going to give it a clear finish, but since you are going to paint it, coat the surface with aluminum point.
